

Come Walk With Me Between Paradise & Hell

You're invited!

Our friend Clayton Klein is on his way down from Paradise to Hell and we're inviting you to walk with him during one of the local segments of the journey.

We hope you'll take some time to walk a ways, or cheer him along from your car, or help him begin or end his day at the local restaurants.

Bring your friends and join in the fun with this inspiring adventurer. At 89, he's an example of what we can do if we stay positive and have faith in our abilities, no matter what our age.

Clayton's motto, a favorite of mine, is With God, All Good Things are Possible. You can read more about him on my blog at Happy Trails!

The walk is on...for Clayton Klein, who embarked Sept. 6 on his 4th Annual Walk for Hospice. That morning, the 89-year-old Fowlerville, MI resident began his 355-mile trek south, down through the heart of Michigan, between Paradise in the Upper Peninsula and Hell in Livingston County.

Klein will reach Hell in the southeastern part of the state on Friday, Sept. 26. Averaging 20 miles a day, the former businessman, author and adventurer is walking to benefit Michigan's Hospice programs.

Usually timing his walk to coincide with the annual Labor Day Mackinac Bridge Walk, Klein started out a few days later this year, since on Labor Day he was attending the Tiger/Yankee baseball game in Comerica Park at the invitation of Tiger owner Mike Ilitch.

Klein last year published his latest book A Well-Kept Secret: From the Glory Years of the Detroit Tigers about his late wife Marjorie's friendship in the late 1930s and early 1940s with the legendary Hall-of-Fame hero Hank Greenberg.

Klein invites the public to walk along with him on the journey -- for a short jaunt, or for a day -- to enjoy the early autumn beauty of Michigan, while walking for Hospice at the same time. Updates are posted at Mark your calendars!

Clayton plans to walk again next year, 2009, the entire 425-mile trip from Paradise to Hell & Beyond to Ohio, including the Labor Day Mackinac Bridge Walk.

Walking the bridge with Clayton last year was fun. Next year, though we hope the Governor takes notice of this remarkable Michigan native.

We're putting the word out -- to help celebrate Clayton's 90th year and 5th Walk in grand style. He's

The Walking Man!
